To Urge Appropriation for Fourteenth Infantry

Officers of the Fourteenth Infantry are hopeful that the State Legislature will see its way clear to provide means in the near future for new quarters for that efficient organization. The regiment has been an unusual wanderer in recent years, and now seeks a permanent home. The present location is regarded as unsuited for armory purposes. The regiment can secure property worth $155,000 from the Allegheny County Commissioners for new quarters, and it is regarded as assured that large private subscriptions could also be obtained.

A prominent officer of the regiment has voiced, for Our State Army and Navy Journal, the sentiment prevalent in the regiment upon its needs for new quarters. In this communication he states:

"The matter of armory facilities in the Fourteenth Regiment is becoming more serious as the time approaches when it will be necessary for the command to again vacate and seek another place to carry on the military activities which are required in order to maintain the standing which this organization has had heretofore. In the past five years, the regiment has been moved no less than five separate times. Continual expense is required in effecting these changes and they are always expenses, the benefit of which is lost when another movement is thrust upon the organization. In the end we are back as far or further than we were five years ago.

"Investigation will show that notwithstanding these embarrassments and difficulties it has been possible, with much energy, to maintain a fairly high standard in the performance of military duties, but this is due entirely to the enthusiasm and efforts of the officers and not to any armory conditions or facilities.

"It is certainly a matter of regret that these conditions exist. In no other organization in the Guard of this Commonwealth can it be said that the State authorities have failed to provide at least some improved facilities of this character. This condition is particularly unexplainable when it is a matter of public knowledge and record that the County Commissioners of Allegheny county stand ready, upon short notice, to purchase valuable property in as great an amount as they have already done for the other local organizations. No other regiment can present to those directing armory affairs the fact that this regiment can secure $155,000 worth of property or such part as may be needed upon which the Armory Board could erect a suitable home, or homes, for this organization.

"The Allegheny county delegation in both the Senate and House appreciate the dire straits of this organization and there is no question or doubt but that they would cheerfully recommend and stand back of any efforts in this behalf.

"Our present location for the headquarters of the majority of the companies is in an old church totally unsuited for the purpose for which it is used, but even this will in a few months be denied us on account of proposed improvements and we will again be compelled to hunt a home no doubt less suitable than the one which we now call an armory.

"It is not unlikely that the representatives from this county will insist upon some consideration being given to this subject at once, with a view to accomplishing the purpose desired. A special amount will be asked for, attaching the proposed appropriation to the general appropriation for the purpose of erection and maintenance of State armories, stipulating, however, that the amount agreed upon shall be appropriated for the specific purpose of relieving this organization of these embarrassing conditions. Generally speaking, the officers are of the opinion that the best results could be obtained and the efficiency of the organization conserved by the erection of company and battalion armories.

"The officers of the organization are in earnest in their determination to do everything possible to obtain results along these lines, and the need was thoroughly discussed at a recent banquet of the officers where they had as their guests a number of the members of the Allegheny county delegation.

"The matter of new companies to complete the regimental organization has been one that has always received much persistent effort, the money for their organization having been appropriated for this specific purpose almost two years ago, but up to date, through we believe no fault of the administration of the organization, only one company of the four necessary has been organized.

"If energy, work and enthusiasm is to secure results, then the Fourteenth Regiment will not only have within a very short time improved armory facilities but will also have the full complement of companies in order to maintain a real Field Service Regiment."

RECRUITING AND DRILL ATTENDANCE IN THE ORGANIZED MILITIA.

Major Charles S. Farnsworth, Sixteenth Infantry, U. S. A.

Paper Read Before the National Guard Association of Pennsylvania, January, 1913, at Scranton, Penna.

The need of action in this Guard in the matter of recruiting and drill attendance impels me to read this paper with the hope that discussion will be aroused and action taken to better existing conditions.

Since this association can only put into operation plans that do not require national legislation, this subject will be treated of only in so far as action can be taken without such legislation.

The average strength of organizations as shown by the strength reports of September 30, 1912, was the minimum strength prescribed, namely, aggregate of 61, but this does not show the true "effective" strength of organization. All officers interested in the Guard, especially company commanders, know that, due to the difficulty of recruiting, some men are retained in the organizations, who would otherwise be discharged, because their occupations prevent them from regularly attending any company duty except summer camps. For the same reason other men are retained whose failure to attend drills is due to carelessness and indifference. These conditions are detrimental to a high average attendance and are deplored by progressive officers. A hint as to these conditions may be gleaned from a consideration of the attendance at drills.

In this Guard there are seven so-called city regiments, six so-called country regiments, that is, regiments whose companies are generally located at less than battalion stations. Taking the reports of drill attendance during November, 1912, of two city and country regiments, selected two each from the eastern and western part of the State, the average attendance at drill during the month of November was 32 per cent. of actual enlisted strength, which gives an attendance of 18½ men. This is believed to be a fair average and it shows the need of action on our part to remedy this deplorable condition.

Some say the Pay Bill will correct this. Possibly it will, and I certainly hope the bill will pass and go into effect very soon, but I do not believe that the Pay Bill, good and desirable as it is, or any other bill will correct matters permanently or in the best way. It will help, but we must help it by striking at the root of the ignorance, indifference and mistaken ideals that are at the bottom of difficult recruitment and poor drill attendance.

A committee of earnest, practical men from this association can evolve and carry into effect a method of uprooting this indifference, ignorance, and error, it can plant in their places a serious feeling of personal pride in local organizations and of interest in State and National organizations. Some persons not on such a committee should aid the committee by giving their ideas, but whatever plan is first adopted should be pushed vigorously, enthusiastically and ceaselessly, modifying it where needed but without waiting for the ideal and perfect plan which will probably never be found.

From personal touch with different organizations in this State and from reading, there has been suggested to me a plan for doing this work. The suggestion came first from an article by Lieutenant D. M. Green, of the Indiana Guard in the National Guard Magazine. Elaborating on his suggestions I have to submit for your consideration a plan of which the general outline is:

First. Informing the public in general as to: the probability of the country's needing trained soldiers in large numbers; the objects and aims of the organized militia. This information system is to go hand in hand with getting prominent local men personally interested in the local organization.

Second. Informing particular firms, corporations and individual employers and parents of all desirable men as to the identity of interest of the organized militia and of themselves and that the State desires co-operation.

Third. Similar information to particular labor unions, social organizations and socialistic societies, etc.

Fourth. A card directory, to be kept in each organization, giving certain data regarding men desirable as recruits.

Fifth. A follow-up system to secure an individual named in the card directory.

Sixth. Getting boys of 15 years of age and upward interested in the organizations.

Now let us go a little more into detail in regard to this outline.

The General Public.

For the information and education of the general public I would have articles in local magazines and newspapers as to the probability of our country needing soldiers in large numbers as shown by history and by reasoning from current events and probable future progress of our countries, especially those differing from us in religion, civilization and customs. A number of marked copies of these magazines and papers could be kept in the company for later use in following up individuals desired for the organization. The money cost of this will be practically nothing, but the labor will be great and continuous, and must, therefore, be divided among many men. Many such articles are now written, but they are published only in military papers such as: National Defense, the Army Service Magazines, the National Guard Magazines, etc., which the public in general does not read and especially the young people do not read. Extracts from these should be presented to local papers and magazines to be published with remarks thereon by local guardsmen and by editorials. There are many men in this Guard capable of and willing to contribute such articles if there is a demand for them by such a committee. Members of other Guards and of the Army will also be glad to contribute short articles if asked to do so.

There should also be circulars printed by the State Headquarters of the Guard giving aims of the N. G. P., its duties, reason for its existence, its position as regards law and order, and the national defense. The Pay Bill might be included. The circular should be prepared at State Headquarters and be distributed or posted by local organizations at places where desirable men are known to assemble or to be in the habit of passing.

Interest of Locally Prominent Men.

To get local leading citizens interested in the local organizations; tender reviews and parades to the Mayor and other members of the city or town government, to members of the State Senate and Legislature, to the Grand Army Post, to U. S. Senators and members of the House of Representatives, to presidents and professors of colleges and high schools, to regimental, brigade, division commanders and higher staff officers of the Guard residing at station of the organization, to civil officers of State similarly residing. Also invite them to other military events and social formations given by the organization. Keep a list of names and addresses of former members of the organization and let them know frequently by some kind of courtesy that they are remembered and honored. Get your organization to take as much interest in them as you would like them to take in your organization. If you can get men such as above mentioned interested it will re-act on the company and members finding themselves of interest to the public will give more attention to attendance as well as recruiting.

Firms and Corporations.

For the information of particular firms, parents, etc., to show identity of interests, there may be circular letters printed by the State Headquarters and furnished upon request to organization commanders to fill out name of firm, etc., and mail. The mailing of this circular letter should then be followed by a personal interview with a representative of the firm by a selected representative of the organization that mailed the circular.

To show you just what I have in mind as to this and other letters, I have prepared and will read such a letter.

Subject: Business efficiency.

You know that efficient conduct of "your" business, "any" business, requires executive ability at its head, organization and system in its operation, harmony and team work between the managers and foremen, discipline and health of all employees. How are these to be obtained? What will produce men who can organize and systematize your departments? What will show men the saneness of team work? What will teach men to aggressively live and strive and yet give due regard to the rights and feelings of both superiors and subordinates, in other words, to control without antagonizing men? What will discipline a man and keep him vigorous, active and healthy?

Let us take these matters separately and in sequence:

First. To organize and systematize may be learned by a study of and practice of organization and systematization. If a man has any exhibited or latent abilities as an organizer, what will develop it so that it will act promptly, without producing friction to retard progress? The plain answer is: Periodical exercise in organization of men and in using his organization. Have you any place where you can give your men this exercise, and if you have not, can you afford the expense of doing it? Does a man get this exercise at the club, at the theatre, at the pool room, at the movies, at the card table?

Do you realize that the State offers your employees the privilege of getting this exercise under the supervision of earnest, experienced and representative men; that it offers this opportunity without expense to them or to you? Would it not be a benefit to your business and to your employees if you would encourage your men to accept this opportunity?

Second. A man learns team work best by work in a group, that is, as a unit, regularly and methodically striving for a definite result. In such a group he learns that no matter how vigorous may be his personal efforts the desired result will not be attained if he does not permit and encourage his team mates to do their parts. Do your men realize this as soon after they enter your employment as you desire? Would it not benefit your business if your employees had additional training in this efficiency principle? Have you paid due attention to the fact that the State maintains an organization wherein men who have given this matter study and experiment are instilling into men this useful aid to all business?

Third. An employee who aggressively lives and strives and yet gives due regard to the rights and feelings of others is not only helping your business but is conferring a blessing upon his State. The State is engaged in training men to do so and to so live and strive and it hopes that you will give your hearty co-operation.

Fourth. Discipline, mental and bodily health are so necessary among employees that you and all your assistants have given thought to their importance. Without them your business must come to a standstill. The productiveness of your establishment fluctuates with the discipline and health of your employees. A statement now made frequently by studious men of Europe and America is that the success of Germany in commerce, manufactures and scientific work is due principally to the discipline and the physical, mental and moral health of her citizens. Are you giving your best efforts toward securing the requisites for success for your employees? While away from their places of work are they spending their time in such places and such recreations as conduce to discipline and health? Your time spent in inducing them to avoid gambling, drinking, late hours, low company, and any kind of excesses will bring you full payment in dollars and satisfaction and will make happier homes. Modern public sentiment even more than modern legislation is holding you responsible for the welfare of your employees outside of, as well as business hours. How can you meet this demand so as to get the best results and without great outlay of both time and funds? The State is now maintaining organizations that can and are meeting this demand but it wants your co-operation; the commanders of companies of the National Guard of Pennsylvania are looking for the same class of men that you are seeking and they are giving the men training in promptness, neatness, orderliness, subordination, use of authority, respect for the confidence in themselves and others, judgment, care of property, economical living, moral cleanliness, concentration of mind; personnel, camp and home hygiene, and musical exercise. In armories and camps, men of self-respect and with the authority of law are present at all meetings to check boisterousness and prevent vulgarity, rowdiness or lawlessness. Possibly you judge the National Guard, or as it is now lawfully called, the Organized Militia, by the militia of ten or twenty years ago. If so, we ask you to investigate what has been done in more recent years and what is now being done by the Organized Militia.

We are asking your co-operation for our mutual benefit and we hope that this co-operation will extend to your subordinates who will reflect your expressions and mental attitude toward the National Guard.

(Signed) JAMES MEAD,
Captain, etc.

It is not claimed that this style of letter will appeal to every head or manager of a business, but it will to some. The form and substance of the letter will have to be varied to meet different classes of heads of business. It would be too much to expect the State Headquarters to provide a form of letter suited to individual managers, but it could provide one for different classes of heads of firms, especially if local organization commanders would help by suggestions. By means of such letters combined with personal interviews you may be able to get statements in writing or in the press to the effect that certain firms guarantee retention of positions and full pay during attendance at camps.

When the general information given in magazines and newspapers has attracted attention, has had time to spread, and has been digested by the public, few if any circular letters as the above or as suggested later in this article, will be required. It is believed that we will be spared the necessity of asking for recruits. They will come unasked and there will be waiting lists in most companies simply because the people believe in the Organized Militia.

MAJOR CHARLES S. FARNSWORTH, SIXTEENTH INFANTRY, U. S. A.

On detail by the War Department as Inspector-Instructor.

Parents and Guardians.

The personal circular letter to parents, guardians, etc., might well include some of that above given, but it should also appeal to their family instinct and ties. In it attention will be called to the fact that membership in the company publishes to the community a sound physique capable of development to such a degree as the member's desire for training permits. If the State will agree to vaccinate for typhoid and smallpox, those who volunteer, this should be included in such letters.

Secretary of War Alger in his report says: "During the war typhoid fever occurred and became epidemic in every camp. More than 90 per cent. of the volunteer regiments developed this disease within eight weeks after their enrollment and the deaths from this camp scourge alone amounted to more than 80 per cent. of the total deaths from disease."

Now I want to give you a statement that would attract favorable attention of many parents and wives. In the U. S. Army vaccination as a preventive of typhoid fever has been voluntary for the past four years and has been compulsory on all men under 45 years of age since September, 1911. As a result of the voluntary vaccination the number of typhoid cases gradually fell from one in every 167 men in the year 1906 to one in every 431 men in 1910. In the only year 1911-12 since the vaccination has been compulsory on men under 45 years there was only one case in every 5,555 men and no deaths among those vaccinated. The cost of the material for vaccination is 12½ cents per man for the three treatments required. Any regimental surgeon will do the vaccinating. In only about one case of every 100 vaccinated is there soreness or illness sufficient to require a man to lose any time from work. No cases of death due to the vaccination have been observed.

Labor Unions and Socialist Societies.

For the information of labor unions, social organizations, etc., there may be printed by State Headquarters another circular letter to be furnished also, upon request, to organization commanders. These letters should be supplemented by others written by the local militia commander and by personal talks to selected men of the local militia organizations with representatives from the unions, etc. By this means the general and local arguments of unions, etc., may be met and a full mutual understanding of each other will be obtained. That such understanding results in less opposition of unions, etc., to the militia is shown by the fact that some companies have many union men in them. Even some classes of socialists are not violently opposed to the militia and their indifference may be turned into friendship, or, at least, prevented from becoming hatred.

Card Directory.

The card directory mentioned in the outline, should be similar to that of any card index system and should show names of men suitable physically, mentally and morally for military service, their residence, occupation, place of work, age, relatives and associates, character of amusements, habits, personality and such other information as will be of use to the organization commander or his assistants in determining what men to take into the company. On each man's card should be kept a record of communications sent to and received from him and the dates thereof and the results.

To obtain the names for these cards, every man of the company should work. Names of desirable men known to field and staff officers should be given to company commanders as soon as discovered.

Follow-up System.

The systematic follow-up plan mentioned might consist of four parts, as follows:

(a) Hand bills to be used to post in public places or mailed in unsealed envelopes. They might show that men are wanted; the advantages and privileges of enlistment in the Guard and in that particular organization; the equipment, pay, armory and camp work, names of the company commander and recruiting committee, lithographs of the company at target practice, on the march, at manoeuver combat or in camp, general history of the company, etc. The location of the armory should always be given and the name or title of some person thereat for whom inquiries may be made.

(b) Blank circular letter to be printed at Headquarters of the Court, to be filled in, mailed and sealed as a personal invitation to investigate the company and its advantages.

(c) A special announcement and invitation to company meetings and entertainments to be sent especially to good men of known solidity and earnestness.

(d) A personal solicitation of men shown as desirable in the card directory by men of the company, preferably corporals. Some persons recommend a cash reward for such work. I doubt the advisability or permanency of such actions. Men engaged in recruiting should, however, be allowed actual expenses. Where personal solicitation is undertaken the company recruiting officer should be kept in touch at all times with what is being done.

A point not to be overlooked in any follow-up scheme is that some sort of communication must be sent or an interview had at regular intervals until the man is enlisted or rejected and you have a waiting list.

The Boys and Parents.

Getting the boys and their parents interested will furnish the surest and best way to get a waiting list from which to select recruits. This may be done in many ways, such as allowing them to come to the armory at stated intervals to witness interesting drills, to take part in gallery practice, to witness or to play games, to accompany small parties on patrols, etc. The whole of any recruiting scheme may also be immeasurably helped by having selected officers or non-commissioned officers of the Guard address high school boys, Y. M. C. A. meetings, Boy Scouts and other organizations of boys. To my mind the greatest defect of our great educational system in the United States is that it has no methodical or inspiring plan for inculcating the military spirit into the youth of this country. The little that they get in school histories is full of misleading statements as to over valor and our successes.

The plan I have given you gives all officers of the Guard, line and staff, the opportunity and the duty to do something for both recruiting and drill attendance.

These two problems are the most difficult ones now confronting the Organized Militia. Compared to them the equipment of the Guard and care of the property are simple problems.

Final responsibility for keeping his organization up to a creditable standard should fall upon the organization commander, upon the company commander for his company, upon the battalion commander for his battalion, upon the regimental commander for his regiment, upon the brigade commander for his brigade, upon the division commander for his division. At present the burden of recruiting at drills falls entirely on company officers and non-commissioned officers. The Eighteenth Infantry, N. G. P., Journal has in its December issue made some pertinent remarks as to assistance of regimental field and staff officers in recruiting attendance. This assistance should extend higher up to include all, even the senior officers of the Guard.

The question of drill attendance is so interwoven with that of recruiting, that almost anything said about one applies to the other, so I make no effort to dismiss them as separate subjects.

Honor and Dignity.

It seems that many officers and enlisted men fail to appreciate the honor of belonging to the Organized Militia. This should and can be corrected. The correction should start with the general information articles to the public in the public press. The honored position he holds should be impressed upon the officer and enlisted man from the ceremony of joining to the day of his leaving the Guard. The officer has his commission signed by the Governor, his rather expensive uniform and a certain social status conferred upon him by membership. There is little trouble in getting him to attend drills. The enlisted man does not have the commission, has a less attractive uniform and his position frequently gives but little "social distinction." He is usually younger and needs to have impressed upon him that he is in the service of his State and country, a sworn defender of our flag.

Your Adjutant General has frequently spoken of this and in a recent circular has called attention to the method used by one of your companies to make impressive a recruit's entrance into the company. I shall not quote that as you have all recently read it. Each company commander can add much to that suggested ceremony Here is a ceremony suggested by Captain Voneiff, of the Maryland Guard: "Have a Guard of Honor on the drill surface. Display the National Flag. Have a band play the National Anthem. Then publicly, inspired by the music and beneath the flag, let them take their oath of allegiance. This may sound theatrical, but enthusiasm is that which carries a man off his feet, and if we can carry our men by storm, the work of building up a regiment is done." If this does sound theatrical, let us consider a moment how many people yet enjoy going to the theatre, and that there is very little, possibly not enough, of the theatrical left in the present day uniform and conduct of the Guard.

I believe the ceremony of enlistment should be made even more of than thus suggested. I believe that citizens of the vicinity of the man's residence should be invited to attend the ceremony, that a speaker should give a brief address on the privileges and benefits of citizenship in this country and the corresponding obligations it imposed upon male citizens.

During the course of the enlistment each man should frequently have something to demonstrate to him to remind him of the benefits he is receiving and of the dignity of his position. This may be brought home to him by a representation of the time and money that is being spent on the Organized Militia; by briefly outlining to him what is being done and what it is hoped to do in the matters of training of himself and elevating the regard in which he is held in the community. His attention should be often called to the fact that he is getting training in the things that have been given in the circular letter to firms, to wit System, team work, promptness, etc.; that he is getting valuable associations, pleasant outings, memorable occasions; that he is absorbing love of country while he is obtaining mental and physical training that retain health and develop abilities to increase his value to his employer or business. He is likely to overlook these facts and to think that he is not being rewarded for the time spent.

Let the men know that their services are being appreciated. The telling them of this fact will be as effective in keeping up their pride as will pecuniary rewards. They can be told this in many ways, one good way being by reading to them, and commenting thereon, the statements of the Presidents of the United States and of prominent men in all walks of life, concerning the value of the Organized Militia. The anti-military organizations have now become so aggressive and so determined to educate the people to their dangerous notions that the public in general, and especially the young men of the country, seldom see any statements in the press favorable to military organizations. We must remember that most of the members of the Organized Militia as well as the young men of the country do not read military journals and military newspapers in which military advocates generally publish their articles.

Esprit.

The good company is always built up around some sort of pride in the organization. This pride may result from superiority in one or several things, but in order that this pride may be lasting, one or more of these things may be military, such as superior marksmanship, accuracy of drill, excellence in patrolling, endurance in marching, severity of discipline, soldierly appearance. The foundation and base of enduring pride and interest in the organization may be military work, military amusement, military comradeship. Decide on some military feature as the spring of main interest and increase its volume by some things that may be locally applicable, such as indoor and outdoor games of skill and strength. Among them may be gallery shooting, bayonet fencing, swimming, boxing, glee clubs, basket ball, bowling, pool, vaudeville, cards. With all these should be included competitions with outside military organizations and civil societies. Smokers are inexpensive and valuable if not given too often. Banquets and dances are generally expensive, and, where they are given for enlisted men, the different social circles in which they move frequently are not congenial and do not harmonize. No one or two things will long help keep up the interest of many men nor will one thing at any time interest all the men, so it is necessary to study the individual bents of the men of the organization and to adopt the means to their taste. Each man of the organization is sooner or later going to ask himself seriously, "What is there in this for me?" The question must be met and answered with for each individual, and it can be done only by varied work.

To have varied and intelligently conducted work requires the efforts of more than one man; it requires the efforts of more than one man, it requires the efforts and co-operation of all officers and non-commissioned officers of the organization, and encouragement from higher officers. The practice of adorning the walls of armories and officers' rooms, more especially the former, with pictures and trophies has much to commend it. On the walls of one very successful company of this Guard are framed announcements of all notable achievements of that company, its standing in target practice, etc., its standing at inspections for the past ten years as compared with other companies of its regiment, brigade and division, a list of the trophies it has won, names of individuals who have won trophies, etc. To these might well be added photographs of the organization in camp, on the march and in combat, photographics of officers and first sergeants, lists of encampments, strike services, war services, achievements in sports and a carefully written history of the organization, giving personal exploits of members by name and kept up to date by adding a chapter each year. All of these should, of course, be placed where easily and consistently accessible to enlisted men of the company.

Let the G. A. R. use the armory and encourage its members to come around. Be courteous to them and get their good words, which will be freely given to the young boys who will soon be of age to join a company. Get and keep the respect and confidence of the community in your organization. Let the local paper have notices weekly of the work of the company, its proposed work for the next week, exploits and doings of individual members.

Whatever is done should be well and consistently advertised to hold the attention of friends and to secure the friendship and help of parents, wives and sweethearts of members.

Gentlemen, it will be worth the time spent if each organization commander in this Guard will sit down for an hour within the week and mentally and with pencil and note-book, make a summary of conditions that now exist in his organization as to recruiting and drill attendance.

How many men have I on my rolls to-day?

What are the names of the men practically permanently absent?

What are the names of men who attend 50 per cent., 75 per cent., 90 per cent. of drills?

Is it worth while to keep men who attend less than 80 per cent. of drills?

What are the names of the men who are for other reasons undesirable?

How can I best get the local public to understand how the Guard stands on the subjects of law, order and national defense?

How can I meet and get the approval of reasonable members of the local labor unions, peace societies, socialistic societies and religious bodies that are now opposed to us?

How can I get the battalion commander, the regimental com-doings of my organizations?

Ho wcan I get the battalion commander, the regimental commander and the brigade commander to visit the organization?

And last and most important, what military feature shall I make a specialty of this year and by what auxiliary feature help the military feature to secure the interest in, and attendance at, meetings of the organization?

Briefly, then, recruiting and attendance can be improved:

First, by general publicity work as to the country's need of and the aims of the Organized Militia. This should be done under the guidance of a small active committee aided by headquarters of the Guard.

Second, by local publicity as to the identity of interests of local concerns and of the Guard.

Third, by truthful, frank, oft-repeated verbal statements by members of the Guard to groups of boys from 15 to 18 years of age.

Fourth, by reviews, parades, entertainments, etc., given to locally prominent men.

Fifth, by showing parents, guardians, etc., the concrete moral advantages of membership.

Sixth, by having a clearly defined system of recruiting, including a follow-up system.

Seventh, by impressing on members of the Guard the dignity and honor of membership.

Eighth, by varying the work and amusements to meet individual tastes.

The National Guard of Pennsylvania has in the past met and overcome difficulties as serious as these, notable among them being the former lack of appreciation of the value of field training and of the responsibility of officers and non-commissioned officers for the welfare and lives of their comrades. I have full faith in its zeal, patriotism, clear sightedness and ability to overcome present difficulties and to prepare itself to win future victories.

BATTERY "B" NOTES.

The annual election of officers for the ensuing year was held at the Battery Armory, Emerson and Alder streets, Pittsburgh, Pa., by the Non-Commissioned Officers' Association, and the following were elected: President, Sergeant Hollis; Vice President, Sergeant Stern; Recording Secretary, Sergeant Rogers; Financial Secretary, Sergeant Clark; Treasurer, Sergeant Armor. Trustees, Corporal Fuehr, Corporal Kennedy, Corporal Ullom; Sergeant-at-Arms, Corporal Charles Leffler; Publicity Man, Musician Frank Jacques.

A most enjoyable time was had at the euchre and dance given by the members of Battery B, on Tuesday evening, January 14. This was the first of a series of entertainments to be given by the Artillerymen. The hall was decorated with colors of the "outfit," and national colors of every nation were displayed along with the International Code Flags. The display made quite a pleasing mass of colors.

Captain Rees has adopted a plan of having an impromptu inspection every month, and the results are beginning to show already, especially in the attendance which has picked up wonderfully. The regular State inspection will be held by the Battery on March 24, 1913.

The Battery basket ball team has so far made a very enviable record for itself. It has so far played several games and as yet have not lost any, winning them all by large scores. They defeated Company A, Fourteenth Regiment, to the tune of 68-2.

TROOP "H," N. G. P.

The non-commissioned of the Troop held a dance at the armory on January 31, and a general good time was provided. The Troopers in every way maintained their reputation as splendid hosts.

A Civic Association, composed of the non-commissioned of the Troop is to be formed at an early date. The object of the association will be to look after the welfare of the Troop and to aid the organization in every way possible.

The increase in attendance is very noticeable since the completion of many needed improvements at the armory. Heretofore the organization was greatly handicapped by not having the proper facilities for a Troop Drill.

COURSES FOR ORGANIZED MILITIA.

(PART V.)

The following courses in Small-Arms Firing are prescribed for the Organized Militia:

General Scheme.

Par. 317. The general scheme of instruction for the Organized Militia embraces: First, a certain amount of instruction in the preliminary drills and exercises, followed by gallery practice, with a prescribed test before the soldier can be advanced to practice on the target range. Second, a definite course of instruction practice, under which, by selected scores of five shots each, a soldier must attain a certain proficiency before he can be advanced to fire the record practice, Organized Militia, or the Qualification Course, Regular Army. Third, a definite test, either the Qualification Course, Organized Militia, or the Qualification Course, Regular Army, at the discretion of the State authorities, under which the soldier attains a certain grade in marksmanship. Fourth, long range practice.

Preliminary Drills and Instruction.

Par. 318. (a) The periods for indoor instruction will be determined by the State authorities and may extend into or include the entire range practice season:

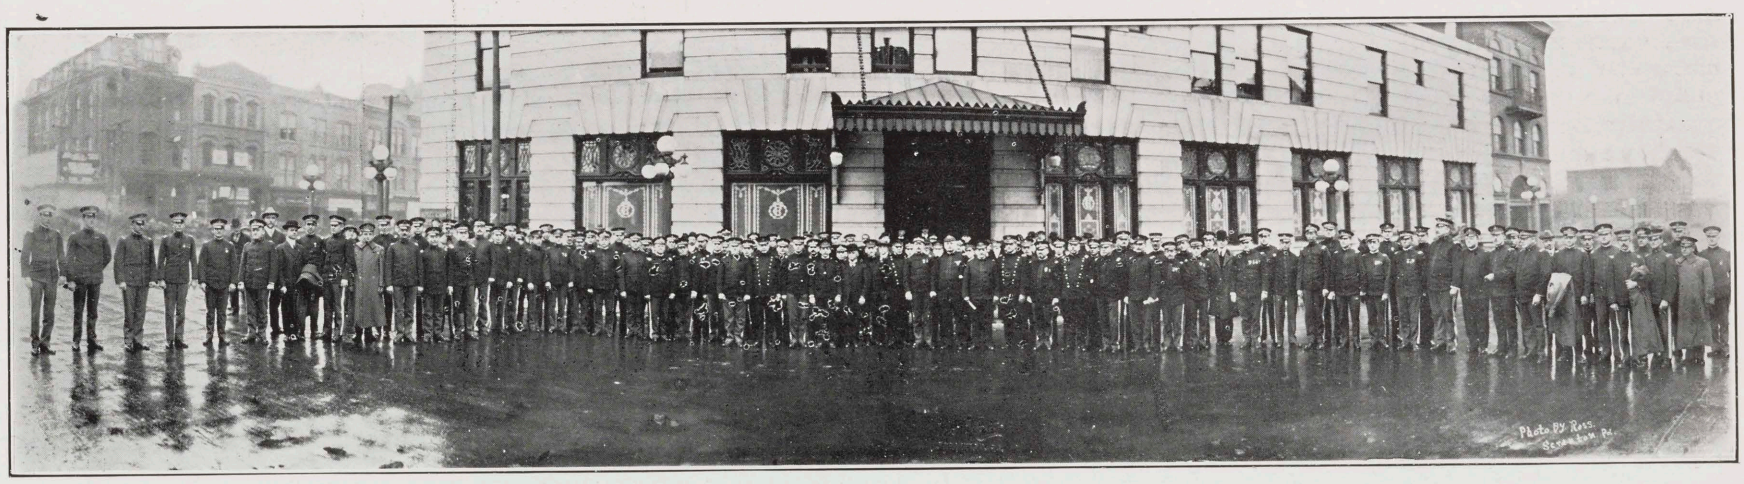
(b) The essentials of indoor instruction will include: Nomenclature, covering the most important parts and elements. Manipulation and use of the various working parts. Care of the arm. Sighting, aiming, positions, and trigger squeeze. Gallery practice.

The course to be followed in indoor instruction is laid down in Part II, Chapters 1, 2, 3, 4; but in the discretion of the State authorities any course embracing the elements given above may be adopted and followed. The recording rifle rod outfit or any other suitable device may be used in such a course.

Gallery Practice.

Par. 319. The principal objects of gallery practice are to continue in the different instruction in aiming, positions, and trigger squeeze, and to determine, in certain cases, whether or not the individual shall be advanced to range practice.

(a) The following course in gallery practice is prescribed:



DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL GUARD CONVENTION AT SCRANTON, PA., JANUARY 11, 1911.

TABLE I.

Range (feet)	Targets.	Position	Minimum number of shots.
50	The iron gallery target issued by the Ordnance Department or one similar thereto, or paper targets.	Prone	10
			10 5 sitting 5 kneeling
50		Sitting Kneeling
50		Standing	10

Where it is impracticable to use ranges of fifty feet, gallery practice may be conducted at a greater distance at a target whose dimensions and divisions have been proportionately increased. Firing will be by scores of five consecutive shots. Except in case of accident, a score once begun will be completed.

Qualification in Gallery Practice.

(b) No officer or enlisted man who has failed to qualify as first-class or better in a previous season shall be advanced to range practice until he has attained at least 90 points out of a possible 150 in the gallery practice course, by selecting his two best scores of five shots at each range. If a gallery range be not available, the recording rifle rod outfit or sub-target gun machine may be used to determine eligibility for range practice, under similar conditions, when specially authorized by the State authorities.

Known Distance Firing.

Par. 320. The Qualification Course is divided into Instruction Practice and Record Practice.

(a) Instruction Practice embraces:

1. A prescribed course in which a certain proficiency must be attained in certain cases, before qualification practice is undertaken, this course may be shot through as many times as is necessary to insure proper instruction.

2. Such further preliminary practice at any range as is considered necessary to prepare the individual for the Record Practice.

3. Firing for recruits may be held at 100 yards in any position except standing, but does not count in determining proficiency in the instruction practice.

(b) The instruction practice and the number of shots at each range upon which eligibility to advance to Qualification Practice is determined are given in the following table:

Instruction Practice—Bull's Eye Targets.

TABLE II.

Range.	Kind of fire.	Time	Shots.	Targets.	Position.	Possible.
200	Slow fire	No limit	10	A	5 sitting 5 kneeling	50
300	Slow fire	No limit	5	A	Prone	25
500	Slow fire	No limit	10	B	Prone	50

TABLE III.

Target D.

(Battle Sight only will be used with this target)

Range.	Kind of fire.	Time	Shots.	Targets.	Position.	Possible.
200	Slow	No limit	5	D	Kneeling	25
200	Rapid	1 minute	5	D	Kneeling from standing	25
300	Slow	No limit	5	D	Prone	25
300	Rapid	1 minute	5	D	Prone from standing	25
					Total	225

1. Each shot is marked in slow fire on Target "D." Rapid fire is conducted as prescribed in Paragraph 112 except as to scores. At each range a total of 60 per cent. of the possible must be attained before advancement to the next range.

2. After eligibility to five record practice has been determined according to the provisions of Paragraphs (d) and (e), the record practice may be preceded by further preliminary practice in the direction of the State authorities.

3. Firing in instruction practice will be by scores of five consecutive shots. A score once begun will be completed, unless accident or conditions of range weather interfere.

(c) The following grades of classification are obtained in instruction practice by selective scores of five consecutive shots each:

First-Classman . . . . . 150-possible 225.
Second-Classman . . . . . 130-possible 225.
Unqualified . . . . . Below-130.

(d) No individual shall be advanced to record practice until he has attained the grade of first-classman, except as provided in Paragraph (e).

(e) During the target season 1913, all who fire shall follow the instruction practice; thereafter instruction practice will be optional with the State authorities for all who have been qualified as marksmen or better in the season immediately preceding.

Record Practice.

Par. 321. After completing the instruction practice, those who qualifiy as first-classmen are eligible to fire the Qualification Course, Organized Militia or the Qualification Course, Regular Army.

The choice of Qualification Courses shall be determined by the State authorities. Both courses may be pursued in the same State in the same season, but the course in regiments or in separate smaller tactical units shall be uniform; provided that an individual who qualifies in the Qualification Course, Organized Militia, as sharpshooter or expert rifleman, may be permitted to fire the Regular Army Qualification Course and qualify therein at the discretion of the State authorities.

Par. 322. (a)

Record Practice—Bull's-Eye Target, Slow Fire.

TABLE IV.

Range.	Time.	Shots.	Targets.	Position.
300	No limit	10	A	Prone
500	No limit	10	B	Prone
600	No limit	10	B	Prone

Target D, Rapid Fire, Battle Sight.

TABLE V.

Range.	Time.	Shots.	Targets.	Position.
200	1½ minutes	10	D	Kneeling from standing.
300	2 minutes	10	D	Prone from standing.

This course may be fired three times in any target season, the individual's classification being determined by the best of his three trials, but this provision shall not be construed to permit the formation of a record based on scores from two or more trials—the basis of classification must be the result of one complete course in each case.

8. The view expressed by the School of Musketry (enclosure to 3rd Ind., A. G. O. 1970585) that there seems to be no objection to making long range firing a part of the record course for the Organized Militia is not incurred in.

The inclusion of long range practice in the record course was recommended by the executive committee of the National Rifle Association. The Acting Chief of the Division of Militia Affairs concurs in the recommendation.

It is manifest, however, that the great need of the militia is training at ranges not exceeding 600 yards; that the time actually available for such training is limited and that the inclusion of long range practice in the record course would tend to divert attention from the main object of training in rifle practice. Long range practice is properly a phase of competitive firing, not of routine training; it is so recognized in the regulations for the Regular Army, and no departure from this principle should be encouraged for the militia.

The regulations originally drafted by the Division of Militia Affairs sanction but do not require long range practice. (Par. 325). It is recommended that no change be made in this paragraph.

Subject to the foregoing modifications, it is recommended that the Small-Arms Firing Regulations be approved and published at the earliest possible date.

WILLIAM CROZIER, Brigadier General,
Chief of Ordnance, Chief of the War College Division.

(b) Coaching is prohibited in record practice after the individual has taken his position at the firing point.

(c) Instruction and record practice may be fired on the same day, but qualification practice once begun must be completed without further instruction firing.

Qualification Course, Regular Army.

Par. 323. The qualification course of the Regular Army shall be carried out by the Organized Militia with a strict adherance to all conditions and provisions required for the Regular Army, except that instruction and record practice may be fired on the same day, but qualification practice once begun must be completed without instruction firing.

Practice for Coast Artillery Reserves.

Par. 324. Special Course "A," as described in Paragraph 121 will be fired by Coast Artillery Reserves of the Organized Militia, unless other courses be prescribed by the State authorities.

Long Distance Practice.

Par. 325. After the Qualification Courses have been completed those men who have qualified as experts and sharpshooters may be given long distance practice at the discretion of the State authorities

Practice for record may be preceded by instruction practice Record practice will consist of any selective score of 10 consecutive shots each. The practice will be conducted as set forth for slow fire, known distance.

Target "C."

TABLE VI.

Range.	Shots.	Position.
800	10	Prone
1000	10	Prone

No one will be advanced to practice at 1,000 yards until he has attained a minimum total of 40 points at 800 yards in any score of 10 consecutive shots.

When an individual has attained a total of 85 points at 800 and 1,000 yards, including a minimum of 40 at 800 yards, by selective scores of 10 consecutive shots, he shall be considered to be qualified in long distance practice, but is not included in the table of classification, nor in the computation of the figure of merit. He may be rewarded by suitable medals or other devices at the discretion of the State authorities.

Practice With Telescopic Sights.

Par. 326. Practice with telescopic sights may be held at the discretion of the State authorities and, when held, will be conducted in accordance with Paragraph 117.

Miscellaneous.

Par. 327. (a) The conditions and requirements governing the conduct of target practice, except as modified in (Part V.) shall be the same for the Organized Militia as for the Regular Army

Dress and Equipment.

(b) The dress and equipment of officers and men participating in target practice shall be prescribed by the State authorities. The cartridge belt will be worn at all times.

Marking.

(c) The provisions of these regulations marking which are impracticable for the Organized Militia may be modified by the State authorities, except for the Qualification Course, Regular Army.

NOTES

It is refreshing to note the great attention which is being given to the comfort and privacy of officers and men in all newly equipped company rooms to-day as contrasted with the slip-shod conditions which prevailed only too recently. When a new armory is erected to-day, it goes as a matter of course that private lockers will be provided, and this convenience has the approval of all. The Keighley Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh, has been most active in the development of the modern locker and its product is known far and wide. The Phoenix Steel Locker has no superior upon the market to-day and has the indorsement of many prominent officers. Among the latest orders for this locker are from the Corapolis Troop, Sheridan Troop, at Tyrone, and Company A, Tenth Infantry, at Monongahela.

Several interesting stunts enlivened a family reunion and banquet of the Third Infantry at their armory, Broad and Wharton streets, on the evening of St. Valentine's Day, Friday, February 14. Captain Louis H. Schmidt, the Regimental Commissary, who was in charge of the dinner, provided a number of unique surprises for the guests. One of these was the representation in miniature of the camp at Mt. Gretna upon the banquet table. This was complete in all details. Colonel Biddle's headquarters were shown on the color line, while Major Doan's hospital quarters, the guard house, detachments of soldiers and other familiar views of the camp were presented. This made a big hit. There were no speeches, but several heart-to-heart talks were made by present and past officers. The committee in charge consisted of Major Henry H. Doan, Captain George Blair, and First Lieutenant Frank A. Warner.

The third entertainment of the present season for Company I, Third Infantry, was a smoker, given under the supervision of the Old Guard, at the company quarters, on Wednesday evening, February 13. The affair, which followed the company drill, provided several amusing vaudeville entertainments, after which lunch was served.

Through the untiring efforts of Captain Harry D. Case, of Company H, Fourth Infantry, assisted by prominent citizens of Lebanon, a most desirable armory site has been secured for his company. The location is ideal. The purchase of the ground was made possible by the public-spirited support of the citizens and commercial organizations. A clear title was given to the State Armory Board, and the company will share in the new appropriation for armories. It is proposed to construct a splendid fortress for the Lebanon company, which has an unusually good record, and is well deserving of modern quarters. The personnel of the company has for many years been of the highest standard, and at the recent inspection, conducted by Major Charles S. Farnsworth, Sixteenth Infantry, U. S. A., the men made a remarkable showing which created much favorable comment. The splendid condition of the rifles, in particular, caused the special praise.

It is stated that Colonel Richard Coulter, Tenth Infantry, will request permission to organize a machine gun platoon, commanded by a second lieutenant, to be located at Greensburg. This would be the first move on the part of a regimental commander to utilize machine gun artillery with the infantry arm, and its progress would be watched with much interest throughout the National Guard.

Speculation is rife in regard to the selection of sites for the encampments which are to be held by the brigades during the summer. Indiana proved such an ideal spot for the tour of duty of the Second Brigade, in 1911, that General Albert J. Logan, commanding, is seriously considering the acceptance of an offer made by the Chamber of Commerce of that city to hold the coming manoeuvres on a site which has been offered directly north of that community. The advantages of this location are reported as equal to those of Mt. Gretna, and it is expected that Major Churchill B. Mehard will shortly survey the ground and report to General Logan, who at present is in Jamaica. The First and Fourth Brigades will probably encamp on alternate dates at Mt. Gretna. The Third Brigade, it is stated, has been offered a suitable site near Sunbury.

Captain Charles C. McGovern, of the Coraopolis Troop, has been given two large steel armor plates, about eight feet square each, by the Carnegie Steel Company, for the splendid rifle range of the organization. Captain McGovern is to be congratulated upon the gift, which should prove of material advantage to the men in their work. The Carnegie Company, has upon numerous occasions, made similar presentations to other units of the National Guard of Pennsylvania and has demonstrated in a practical manner its interest in the organized militia of the State. In this same connection, it should be stated that Major H. P. Bope, Ordnance Department, Second Brigade, who is the first vice-president of the Carnegie Steel Company, is devoted to all matters pertaining to rifle practice and is zealous in developing the junior shots of the State to the highest degree of efficiency Major Bope is likewise interested in organizing a first-class State team for the next national match in the hope that the laurels of this great shoot may be brought to Pennsylvania.

After having been tossed around from pillar to post, the First Brigade Headquarters of Brigadier General William G. Price, Jr., have been located in a suite of rooms on the fourth floor of the Betz Building, Philadelphia. For years, the headquarters were on the fifth floor of the City Hall, but the needs of additional quarters for the municipal departments necessitated their removal about a year ago. Since that time the brigade has been without any regular headquarters, and the work has naturally been very much handicapped.

A celebrated artist has been engaged to paint life-size portraits of Colonels Peter Lyle, Robert P. Dechert, O. C. Bosbyshell, John Biddle Porter, Henry T. Dechert, and Robert C. H. Brock, all former commanders of the time-honored Second Infantry, and the present Colonel Hamilton D. Turner. It is expected that these paintings will shortly be finished and hung in the officers' assembly room.

The engagement of Captain Harry D. Case, Fourth Infantry, to Miss Elizabeth W. Henry, of Lebanon, is announced.

In a recent communication, Major Harry L. Gilchrist, Medical Corps, U. S. A., strongly recommends the organization of two field hospitals and one ambulance company for the Pennsylvania Guard In this connection the names of Major and Surgeon James F. Edwards, assigned to the Fourteenth Infantry, has been mentioned as a suitable organizer for the first field hospital to be located in Pittsburg, and Major and Surgeon Henry H. Doan, assigned to the Third Infantry, for the second field hospital to be located in Philadelphia, and Captain and Assistant Surgeon Fred O. Waage, assigned to the First Infantry, for the ambulance company. Major Gilchrist also strongly favors combination camps of instruction.

Company G, Tenth Infantry, stationed at Hollidaysburg, is taking on new life and recently passed a very creditable preliminary inspection. While this company has been working under adverse circumstances, it is confidently expected that, with the infusion of new blood and the co-support of some of the leading citizens headed by Colonel Andrew S. Stayer, it will soon be in the fore ranks of the Infantry units. Captain Weaver states that he will present the company to the State Inspector with the maximum strength.

The First Infantry review tendered to Major General James W Latta, Brigadier General R. Dale Benson, and Brigadier General Theodore E. Weidersheim on Saturday evening, February 22nd (Washington's Birthday) promises to be the social military event of the season in Philadelphia. Great preparations are being made by Colonel Eidell and a committee of officers to make this a notable occasion in the history of the regiment. Military, Naval, National, and State officials will be present.

The First Brigade of the Maryland National Guard is meeting with much success of instruction in indoor gallery practice, which was started with the new year. The curriculum includes indoor gallery practice and sighting, and position and aiming drills. During the months of January, February and March, twenty minutes of each drill night is devoted to sighting, position and aiming drills. The indoor target ranges of the Fourth and Fifth Regiments, at Baltimore are used for this purpose. Practice is compulsory. In each regiment the Regimental Inspector of Small-Arms Practice has direct charge of the instruction, under the general supervision of the Regimental Commander. Reports are submitted monthly to Adjutant General W. W. Crosby by the Inspectors of Small-Arms Practice and by commanding officers of separate organizations, showing the work accomplished, the number of men qualified at the gallery practice test, and such recommendations as may conduce to the betterment of the service.

Mr. Harry Buffamoyer, associate member of Company H, Fourth Infantry, has on numerous occasions entertained the company with sleight-of-hand performances at the Lebanon Armory, and is quite an artist in this particular line of entertainment. Mr. Buffamoyer is one of the leading builders of Central Pennsylvania and was awarded the contract for the erection of the State Armory at Pine Grove.

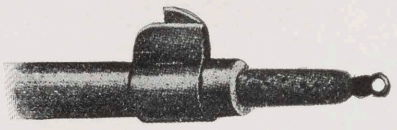
Your Rifles Kept Perfectly Clean from One Encampment to Another.



The Ideal Anti-Rust Rope

Has solved the problem, of keeping the rifles in perfect condition at all times. They are saturated with a rust preventive and when placed in the rifle they exclude all air and moisture. Being larger than the bore the oil is pressed against the entire inside of the barrel. You have undoubtedly had the experience of taking a rifle from the arm rack and finding rust spots in the barrel. Although the rifle had been well cleaned and oiled when put away. The trouble comes from this fact. Oil will very often, on smooth and highly polished metal, slide off, on small patches of the metal, in little globules, leaving the metal perfectly bare on these patches. Then moisture gets in its work and sets its indelible seal in the glistening steel, causing damage and a constant eyesore and increased worry to every company commander. To keep your rifles spotless they will require daily inspection under the old way of treating them. Air and moisture are rust breeders, are everywhere and at all times.

The Ideal Anti-Rust Ropes

Have solved the problem. These ropes will absolutely prevent rust where they are used and all worry and trouble are eliminated.

FREE SAMPLE—We will send to any Captain or Quartermast r. Four Ideal Anti-Rust Ropes, a solid brass Ramrod, bottle of Gun Oil, Ex. prepaid, upon receipt of 50 cents in stamps, which amount may be deducted from first order.

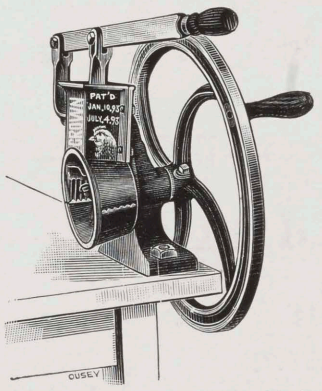
THE CROWN BONE CUTTER

ALSO BONE AND SHELL MILLS



FOR the Poultryman: always ready for work. Utilize all waste from the table for hens.

A gentleman writes: "I like the way your Bone Cutter does its work. Cuts bone, vegetables and slice potatoes for chips.

EGGS IN WINTER—When eggs are highest in price and the hens won't lay, there is something wrong with the way they are fed.

When it is remembered that cut green bone easily takes the place of bugs and insects and makes the hens lay even when it's zero, it is not surprising that poultry keepers are rapidly adopting cut bone as a feed. Send for catalog to
